- ProPublica's stimulus. Non-profit investigative group ProPublica's stimulus home page. Great resource for accessing data in a clearer way than most government Web sites.
 - Recovery Tracker: Simple, easy-to-use tool for finding stimulus projects near you.
 - Stimulus Background Checks: Resources and tips on how to run background checks on recipients of stimulus money.
 - Reporting resources –
 - Stimulus data by state:
 - Reporting Network: Not specific to “green” but has distributed stimulus data/tips.
 - The official government website for the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. And the Text of bill (PDF):
- Recovery.org: Generally more accurate/recent than .gov. Operated privately by Onvia. The most detailed data is available for purchase – though they do partner with media organizations.
- The Department of Energy's stimulus page, provides basic information on types of programs.
 - Energy.gov: Recovery funding: Mainly intended for applicants, but useful to at least provide a least of what opportunities there are for each area of “green”.
 - Renewable funding:
- Section 1603 (renewable energy cash grants) home page. Bottom link provides a list of awards, updated weekly. As of May 28, $3.2 billion in grants to 558 projects in 43 states.
- Section 48c (manufacturing tax credit), awarded in January - $2.3 billion to 183 projects.
- “Show Me the Money”: Guide to green energy programs in the stimulus compiled by law firm Stoel Rives. Many law firms that advise clients on federal funding have similar guides, this one happens to be the one I use.
